

John's Journey - Day 41

May 11, 2009

Muenster, TX

I woke up early this morning to feed the mules and it is still raining. I'm not sure what I'm going to do yet so I'll wait a couple of hours to see if it's going to show any signs of clearing.

It's after 9:00 and still raining too hard to travel safely so I'm going to stay put today at the Muenster Sale Barn.

Janet Hastman from the Muenster Enterprise came by today and interviewed me. The article should be in the local paper in the next day or so.

Bob Barker also stopped by and brought me a sub sandwich from Subway. It finally stopped raining again about lunchtime.

W. R. (Ron) Wood came by and donated 50 pounds of oats & four mineral blocks. This should make sure the mules are getting all the minerals that they need for good health.

Quite by surprise, Elaine also showed up. I took her out to eat at a local steak house. We had a nice dinner and a great time chatting about everything under the sun. It's really neat to find someone who cares about similar things as I do. She likes Quarter Horses. She's into small ears not big ears. I told her if she ever had the big ears she'd never go back. We laughed and had a great time together.
